Art Association of Montreal,

PHILLIPS SQUARE.

SPECIAL PAINTINGS ON EXHIBITION SEPTEMBER, 1891.

A.—Portrait of the Duke of Wellington.

By SIR THOS. LAWRENCE, P.R.A.

1769—1830.

B.—Cupid and Psyche.

By R. WESTALL, R.A.

1765—1836.

This fine Painting, with its wonderful richness of colour, was pronounced by John Constable to be a masterpiece, originally belonged to his friend, Mr. Banister; a descriptive poem by Thomas Moore will be found on the reverse side. Richard Westall was born at Hertford in 1765, celebrated chiefly as an illustrator of books, he was elected an Associate in 1792, and an Academician in 1794; he died in 1836, Both from the collection of the Marquis of Ely.

C.—Four large Panels, figure subjects.

By ADOLPHE MONTICELLI.

1824—1886.

Painted by the advice of 'Diaz,' for a French Duke, and pronounced fine examples of his work.

The Association is indebted to Messrs. W. SCOTT & SONS for kindly allowing these Pictures to be exhibited at the Gallery.

These Paintings are for sale; particulars can be obtained from the Secretary.

Cupid and Psyche.

---

They told her that he, to whose vows she had listen'd
Through night's fleeting hours, was a spirit unblest :—
Unholy the eyes that beside her had glisten'd,
And evil the lips she in darkness had prest.

'When next in thy chamber the bridegroom reclineth,
Bring near him thy lamp, when in slumber he lies,
And there, as the light o'er his dark features shineth,
Thou'lt see what a demon hath won all thy sighs.'

Too fond to believe them, yet doubting, yet fearing,
When calm lay the sleeper, she stole with her light ;
And saw—such a vision !—no image, appearing
To bards in their day-dreams, was ever so bright.

A youth, but just passing from childhood's sweet morning
While round him still linger'd its innocent ray ;
Though gleams, from beneath his shut eyelids gave warning
Of summer-noon lightnings that under them lay.

His brow had a grace more than mortal around it,
While, glossy as gold from a fairy-land mine,
His sunny hair hung, and the flowers that crown'd it
Seem'd fresh from the breeze of some garden divine.

Entranc'd stood the bride, on that miracle gazing
What late was but love is idolatry now ;
But, ah : in her tremor the fatal lamp raising—
A sparkle flew from it and dropp'd on his brow.

All's lost—with a start from his rosy sleep waking,
The spirit flash'd o'er her his glances of fire,
Then, from the clasp of her snowy arms breaking,
Thus said, in a voice more of sorrow than ire :

'Farewell—what a dream thy suspicion hath broken !
Thus ever Affection's fond vision is crost ;
Dissolv'd are her spells when a doubt is but spoken,
And love, once distrusted, forever is lost !'

THOMAS MOORE.
